FOREWORD

This listing of agencies was compiled in connection with a National Conference on Homemaker and Related Services to be held in February 1959. The Public Health Service conducted a survey of homemaker services provided across the Nation as background for that Conference. In the process of the survey, the information for this Directory was collected during February and March 1958. Each agency was given the opportunity to review its listing prior to publication. Only a few did not furnish complete information on all items.

The 1958 Directory was prepared in the Division of Public Health Methods, Public Health Service, in cooperation with the Children's Bureau and the Bureau of Public Assistance, Social Security Administration. Five prior directories have been issued by the Children's Bureau in the period 1942-1956.

The participating organizations within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare wish to thank the agencies listed for their assistance in making this detailed Directory possible.

INTRODUCTION

A total of 145 agencies provided homemaker and related services in the continental United States in the spring of 1958. These agencies, listed in this Directory, provide organized service in which homemakers are recruited, trained, supervised, and paid by the agency to furnish home help service to families with children, aged persons, and/or long-term patients. Three of the agencies report that their homemakers are paid directly by the families whom they serve.

Area Covered

Services are reported by agencies in 32 States and the District of Columbia. The States without any homemaker service are located as follows: 3 in the Northeast region (Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont), 3 in the North Central region (Iowa, North Dakota, and South Dakota), 3 in the South (Alabama, South Carolina, and West Virginia), and 7 in the West (Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, and Washington). A summary of the number of agencies in each State is given on page 9.

Homemaker service is available in about 150 of the 3,100 counties. The agencies providing this service are located in 104 cities. The public agencies usually provide service on a county basis while the voluntary agencies tend to serve a city and its accessible environs.

Year Service Established

Only one of the agencies now providing homemaker service established such a program prior to 1930, the year 1925 being the earliest date reported. Of the programs currently in existence, 16 were started during the thirties, 44 during the forties, 54 in the period 1950-55, and 24 in the following two years.

Six agencies started new programs in 1958, with service to families actually underway in 3 at the time of the survey. One agency not included in the count of 145 discontinued its homemaker service in March 1958.

Type of Agency

A total of 111 programs—three out of four—are under private auspices. They are operated by voluntary agencies of the following types: 51, family service; 3, children's service; 39, combined family and children's service; 5, visiting nurse service; and 13, others including health service agencies and agencies whose primary function is providing homemaker or related services.

Of the 34 homemaker programs under public auspices, 29 are administered by departments of public welfare in which both child welfare and public assistance programs are located. Three programs are administered by public child welfare agencies not connected with public assistance; another program is sponsored by a juvenile welfare board; and the fifth is sponsored by a public health service agency. Of the 29 programs located in departments of welfare, 20 are administered by the child welfare program, 5 by public assistance, and 4 by a combination of the two.

Type of Service

Seventy-four agencies provide homemaker service both for families with children and for adult families. Included in this count are 25 agencies that started service for families with children and at a later date changed their policy to include adult families.

Service only for families with children is the policy for 49 agencies. An additional 14 agencies have primary emphasis on families with children, with service available to adult families on a limited basis or only during a crisis.

Three agencies offer service for adult families only. Five agencies relate their service solely to chronically ill persons—3 for cancer, 1 for tuberculosis, and 1 for long-term patients.

Of the 93 voluntary family and/or children's service agencies, 56 provide homemaker service for families with children and for adult families; 35 have sole or primary emphasis on families with children; and 2 serve adult families only. The other 18 voluntary agencies provide homemaker service as follows: 12 for families with children and for adult families, 1 for families with children only, 1 for adult families only, and 4 for the chronically ill. The 34 public agencies include 6 that provide service for families with children and for adult families, 27 that limit their service to families with children, and 1 that serves tuberculosis patients only.

Homemakers Employed

The 145 agencies report a total of 1,778 homemakers in their employ, either on salary or paid wages only for hours worked. Included are those employed full time, part time, or on call. Not all of the homemakers worked during the week for which the report was made.

The range in number of homemakers per agency is from 1 to 131. One-third of the agencies have fewer than 4 homemakers. Only 5 agencies report as many as 50 homemakers: two public agencies, two voluntary family service agencies, and one voluntary health service agency.

The public agencies employ 340 homemakers. The voluntary family and/or children's service agencies reported 1,117 homemakers; the other voluntary agencies, 321 homemakers.

¹For the majority of the agencies the data refer to the week of January 13-19, 1958. Some agencies reported on service during a week in March 1958.

²Excludes one agency (with 2 homemakers) that discontinued providing homemaker service in March 1958.

³No families are included for the new program started in the spring of 1958.

The 74 agencies that provide service for families with children and for adult families employ 1,309 homemakers. The 63 agencies with sole or primary emphasis on families with children employ 407 homemakers. The other 8 agencies that serve only adult families or chronically ill persons employ 62 homemakers.

Families Served by Homemakers

During a 1-week period in January or March 1958 a total of 2,186 families were served by homemakers. This includes both families with children and adult families. The public agencies reported serving 649 families; the voluntary family and/or children's service agencies, 1,143 families; the other voluntary agencies, 394 families.

Detailed analysis of the composition and characteristics of the families served, the situations that required assignment of homemakers, the kinds of services provided, and the hours of service given will be available in the report of the nationwide survey, to be published in the winter of 1958-59.
